

St Paul's Cathedral & Millennium Bridge

St Paul's Cathedral

St Paul's Cathedral is a church in London. The first St Paul's Cathedral was burnt during the Great Fire of London (1666). After the Great Fire the present cathedral was built between 1675 and 1710. It sits in the City (business district of London). It is famous because its dome is among the highest in the world and St Paul's Cathedral was the tallest building in London from 1710 to 1962. Some movies were shot in this cathedral like Lawrence of Arabia and Mary Poppins.

In this Cathedral lots of events occurred like the funerals of Lord Nelson, Sir Winston Churchill and Margaret Thatcher but also the wedding of Lady Diana Spencer and Charles, Prince of Wales.

Millenium Bridge

The Millenium Bridge is a steel suspension bridge. Its constuction began in 1998 and the bridge was opened in June 2000. Across the river Thames, the bridge connects the City of London and St Paul's Cathedral to the Globe Theatre and the Tate Modern.
